About The Authors

DR. HERMAN PIVEN is full-time director of the project. He has directed research and taught on the graduate level in social work for a number of years.

DR. ABRAHAM ALCABES is co-director of the project and is also engaged in teaching and research at the Columbia University Graduate School of Social Work.

Both authors have worked as probation officers and have conducted research in the correctional field. Their recent studies have focused on developing evaluation instruments by which to assess the impact of training on correctional practice.

PREFACE

Many individuals and organizations have expressed the need to identify various types of training programs designed to prepare for practice with delinquents and offenders. Students, faculty members, training leaders, practitioners and others have frequently requested information as to the location of training for specific roles in the field of Criminal Justice. This directory attempts to provide information of this nature in compact form. It identifies those academic institutions and service organizations which report major training programs for practice in corrections, law enforcement and the courts.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DIRECTORY^{1/}

Part I. Listed in Part I are colleges, universities, and graduate professional schools which offer a major course of study for practice in the field of Criminal Justice.

- A. Educational programs in departments other than professional schools are classified into senior and junior colleges and designated as follows: (1) Criminology/Social Deviance; (2) Corrections/Correctional Administration; (3) Law Enforcement/Police Science/Police Administration; (4) other programs designed to train for work with juvenile or adult offenders.
- B. Educational programs in graduate schools of (1) social work, (2) clinical psychology, (3) psychiatry, and (4) law are designated by specialized courses in the classroom and field for professional practice in Criminal Justice.

Part II. This section contains a list of Crime and Delinquency Centers which are structurally associated with a university and engaged in training. Their programs are designated according to the academic and practitioner personnel groups being trained.

^{1/} Relevant definitions used throughout the study are provided in the introduction to each section of the directory.

Part III. Criminal Justice systems which conduct major In-Service Training programs are listed in this section: (A) probation/parole, (B) correctional institutions, and (C) law enforcement systems.

Each is classified by government level. Their programs are designated according to the practitioner groups engaged in In-Service Training.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

The directory is based upon data reported directly to the project by academic institutions and Criminal Justice systems. The populations surveyed by the project are as follows:^{1/}

TYPE OF ORGANIZATION	NUMBER OF ORGANIZATIONS		RETURN RATE
	SURVEYED	RESPONDED	%
Colleges and universities (other than professional schools) a/	838	602	72

Law enforcement	759	308	41
Total	4,684	2,453 a/	52 a/

a/ Does not include small number of late returns excluded from computer analysis.

b/ Forty-seven additional organizations were initially identified as Centers in the literature and 46 of these responded to the survey. They are excluded here because their responses showed them to be regular academic departments of the university or organizations other than Crime and Delinquency Centers.

^{1/} Study populations and procedures are described briefly in Appendixes A to F. For detailed findings and descriptions of study populations, see Herman Piven and Abraham Alcabes, Education, Training, and Manpower In Corrections And Law Enforcement (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Development, 1966), Volumes I-IV. See also Volumes V and VI, forthcoming.

It is likely that some additional training programs which meet study criteria are offered by organizations not listed in the directory. There are three possible reasons why such organizations are omitted: (1) the organization initiated a new training program since the surveys were completed; (2) the organization was not included among the project populations for survey; (3) the organization did not respond to project questionnaires.

It is our hope that subsequent publications of the Criminal Justice training directory will include an even more complete list of training organizations and programs than is provided in this initial edition.

PART I

ACADEMIC INSTITUTIONS OFFERING COURSES OF STUDY FOR THE FIELD OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES OFFERING A CONCENTRATION IN THE CRIME AND DELINQUENCY FIELDS
(1965/66 AND 1966/67) 1/

Introduction

This section lists academic institutions and departments, other than graduate professional schools, which report that they offer a concentration ("twelve or more credit hours in a defined program of study")^{2/} in one or more of the Crime and Delinquency fields.

The four types of Crime and Delinquency concentration were defined as follows:

- (1) Criminology/Social Deviance - the study of causes and responses to crime and delinquency as social or psychological phenomena
- (2) Corrections/Correctional Administration - the practice and administration of programs for prevention, control, and treatment of offenders
- (3) Law Enforcement/Police Science/Police Administration - the practice and administration of programs for detection and apprehension of offenders
- (4) "Other" educational programs designed to train students for work with juvenile or adult offenders

The list which follows is separated by college level. All 96 senior colleges listed have regional accreditation.^{3/} Twelve of the 75 junior colleges listed do not have regional accreditation and are identified accordingly.^{4/}

1/ See Appendix A for a summary of study method and a description of colleges and universities surveyed by the project.

2/ This would constitute at least a minor program of study in most colleges.

3/ According to Lovejoy's College Guide, (8th edition, 1966).

4/ These institutions are designated by the symbol (J2).

This section lists University Crime and Delinquency Centers which report that they offer training programs in Criminal Justice for academic or practitioner groups. The five criteria for a Center are:

- (1) That it exist as a distinct organizational unit
- (2) That it be responsible to either central administration and/or a school or department of a university or college
- (3) That it employ at least one full-time professional staff member
- (4) That new employees be selected by center staff and administration rather than by outside organizations
- (5) That it offer training courses, institutes, or workshops for at least one of the following groups during the academic years 1965/66 or 1966/67:^{2/}

Law enforcement personnel (i.e., administrators, police officers - adult division, and police officers - juvenile division)

Court personnel (i.e., judges in criminal, juvenile, or family courts, prosecuting attorneys, and public defender attorneys)

Probation and parole personnel (i.e., administrators, parole board members, probation/parole officers - adult division, and probation/parole officers - juvenile division)

Correctional institution personnel (i.e., administrators, cottage parents, correctional officers, classification and assignment personnel, diagnostic and treatment personnel, and general counseling personnel)

Faculty of the college or university

1/ See Appendix C for a summary of study method and a description of the centers surveyed by the project.

2/ This criterion excludes organizations engaged in research, consultation, or related activities but not directly engaged in training personnel for Criminal Justice.

Matriculated students enrolled in courses offered for degree credit

A Continuing Center is defined as one whose training programs in Criminal Justice are assured until at least 1970.

Crime and Delinquency Centers (N=27) are listed alphabetically by state. Twenty-three Centers offered training programs in both 1965/66 and 1966/67. One Center terminated at the end of the 1965/66 academic year and three others began training operations in 1966/67.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES CONDUCTING
MAJOR IN-SERVICE TRAINING PROGRAMS

PROBATION/PAROLE SYSTEMS

Introduction

This section contains a list of probation and parole systems which report major In-Service Training programs.

A probation/parole system is defined as follows: All departments, divisions, and branch offices of a public organization whose functions include probation or parole work or administration, and whose personnel were recruited to and operate under the direction of the same top executive.

In-Service Training is defined as training programs which consist of a scheduled series of teaching sessions that are organized and conducted under the sole auspice of the responding probation/parole system. In-Service teaching sessions may be limited to particular personnel of the system or may be open to employees of other correctional systems.^{2/}

A major In-Service Training program is determined by two criteria: (1) that the probation/parole system employ at least one staff member responsible for training on a full-time basis or that its training programs be formally organized through a Central Training Unit (Training Center, Training Department); (2) that the probation/parole system employ a staff of at least ten full-time probation/parole officers.

Probation/parole systems conducting major In-Service Training programs (N=43) are classified by level of government. Each system is designated 1/ See Appendix D for a summary of study method and description of the probation and parole systems surveyed by the project.

2/ In-Service Training is distinguished from (1) General Training (e.g., supervisory conferences, special lectures or seminars, and short-term institutes or workshops), (2) Outside Training (i.e., training programs conducted by other organizations in which the probation/parole system participates either as a co-sponsor or by providing arrangements for attendance of its staff members).

by whether it offers training programs to the following practitioner groups:

Trainees - defined as employees who will become professional staff members only upon completion of their on-the-job training apprenticeship

New practitioners - defined as personnel who have been members of professional staff for six months or less

Experienced practitioners - defined as personnel who have been members of professional staff for more than six months

In addition, each system is identified according to whether it serves adult offenders, juveniles, or both.

CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTION SYSTEMS

Introduction

This section lists correctional institution systems reporting major In-Service Training programs.

A correctional institution system is defined as follows: All prisons, reformatories, jails, workhouses, training schools, camps, halfway houses, diagnostic centers, and other correctional facilities and their personnel which operate as a separate administrative unit under the direction of the same top executive.^{2/}

In-Service Training is defined as training programs which consist of a scheduled series of teaching sessions that are organized and conducted under the sole auspice of the responding institutional system. In-Service teaching sessions may be limited to particular personnel of the system or may be open to employees of other correctional systems.^{3/}

A major In-Service Training program is determined by two criteria: (1) that the correctional institution system employ at least one staff member responsible for training on a full-time basis or that its training programs be formally organized through a Central Training Unit (Training Center, Training Department); (2) that the correctional institution system be located on the state or federal level, be a training school for juveniles on the county or municipal level, or be a private institution caring for juvenile offenders.^{4/}

1/ See Appendix E for a summary of study methods and description of the correctional institution systems surveyed by the project.

2/ When juvenile and adult facilities and personnel are divided into separate administrative units, each with its own top executive, they are treated as two systems.

3/ In-Service Training is distinguished from (1) General Training (e.g., supervisory conferences, special lectures or seminars, and short-term institutes or workshops), (2) Outside Training (i.e., training programs conducted by other organizations in which the correctional system participates either as a co-sponsor or by providing arrangements for attendance of its staff members).

4/ The correctional institution systems excluded by these criteria are city and county jails and workhouses and juvenile detention homes.

Correctional institution systems conducting major In-Service Training programs (N=42) are classified into state systems, county and municipal systems, and private institutions for juveniles. Each system is designated by the practitioner groups for whom training is offered and the age group of its inmate population.

LAW ENFORCEMENT SYSTEMS

Introduction

This section contains a list of law enforcement systems which report major In-Service Training programs.

A law enforcement system is defined as follows: All departments, divisions and branch offices of a public organization whose functions include law enforcement, and whose personnel were recruited to and operate under the direction of the same top executive.

In-Service Training is defined as training programs which consist of a scheduled series of teaching sessions that are organized and conducted under the sole auspice of the responding law enforcement system. A major In-Service Training program is determined by two criteria: (1) that the law enforcement system employ at least one staff member responsible for training on a full-time basis or that its training programs be formally organized through a Central Training Unit (Training Center, Training Department); (2) that the law enforcement system be located on the state or federal level or in a large county (with the county seat having a population of at least 250,000), or in a large municipality (cities with a population of at least 100,000).

^{1/} See Appendix F for a summary of study method and description of the law enforcement systems surveyed by the project.

^{2/} In-Service Training is distinguished from (1) General Training (e.g., supervisory conferences, special lectures or seminars, and short-term institutes or workshops), (2) Outside Training (i.e., training programs conducted by other organizations in which the law enforcement system participates either as a co-sponsor or by providing arrangements for attendance of its staff members).

Law enforcement systems conducting major In-Service Training programs (N=103) are classified by level of government. Each system is designated by whether it offers training programs to the following practitioner groups:

Recruits - defined as new employees being trained for certification as law enforcement officers

Juvenile officers - defined as police officers whose major assignment is to the juvenile or youth division (bureau or detail)

Other officers - defined as police officers whose major assignment is to a unit other than the juvenile division

APPENDIX A

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

96/-97-

The 602 colleges and universities from which data are drawn for this directory are located in 47 states and the District of Columbia.^{1/} California is represented by the largest number of institutions (87), followed by New York (51), Pennsylvania (39), Illinois (25), and Michigan (23). Those states with the smallest representation are North Dakota (2), Nevada (1), and Maine (1).

Table I below shows the distribution of responding colleges and universities among nine regions of the country.

RESPONDING ACADEMIC INSTITUTIONS, CLASSIFIED BY REGION

REGION ^{a/}	NUMBER OF RESPONDING ACADEMIC INSTITUTIONS	PER CENT OF TOTAL
New England	39	6.5
Middle Atlantic	98	16.3
East North Central	91	15.1
West North Central	63	10.5
South Atlantic	85	14.1
East South Central	44	7.3
West South Central	41	6.9
Mountain	31	5.1
Pacific	110	18.3
TOTAL	602	100.1

^{a/} The nine regions correspond to those utilized by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in their Uniform Crime Reports.

^{1/} Alaska, Hawaii, and Delaware are not represented.

Ninety-nine per cent (402) of responding senior colleges, and eighty-nine per cent (175) of responding junior colleges are accredited.^{1/} The 25 non-accredited institutions were included in the survey because they had been cited in earlier studies as offering an educational program in one or more of the Crime and Delinquency fields.

Two-thirds of the responding academic institutions are four-year (senior) colleges which offer a baccalaureate degree. The remaining one-third are two-year (junior) colleges offering an associate degree. As shown in Table II below, the relative proportion of responding senior and junior colleges is virtually identical to their proportion in the project mailing.^{2/}

TABLE II

Senior	(574)	68	(406)	67
Junior	(264)	32	(196)	33
TOTAL	(838)	100	(602)	100

^{1/} For project purposes, accredited schools are those academic institutions designated in Lovejoy's College Guide (8th ed. New York: Simon and Schuster, 1966), as having regional approval and recognition by one of the six regional accrediting associations in the United States. An academic institution which is approved only by a state university, state board, department of education, or a professional association is considered non-accredited.

^{2/} All percentages in this and subsequent tables are rounded for ease in reading. The actual sum of rounded percentages is reported in all cases.

A review of earlier studies, college guides, and college bulletins revealed a total of 328 academic departments in 318 institutions which were cited as offering an "educational program" in one or more of the Crime and Delinquency fields. A detailed questionnaire of 12 pages (long form) was sent to each of the cited "program" departments.^{1/} The return rate from these departments was 66 per cent.^{2/}

A briefer questionnaire of 6 pages (short form) was sent to 510 colleges and universities which had not been cited in earlier studies as offering an "educational program" in the Crime and Delinquency fields.^{3/} These institutions were of two kinds: (1) 83 colleges and universities with an undergraduate program in social welfare,^{4/} (2) 427 colleges and universities representing a one-third random sample of junior colleges and senior colleges.^{5/} The return rate from these 510 colleges and universities was 75 per cent.^{6/}

^{1/} Questionnaires were addressed personally to the chairman of the department or that individual listed as responsible for Crime and Delinquency programs.

^{2/} This includes 149 long-form returns and 68 responses to a shorter follow-up questionnaire.

^{3/} Questionnaires were addressed directly to the president or chancellor of the college or university.

^{4/} The original listing for this group consisted of 88 schools located at accredited senior colleges (listed in an untitled directory compiled by the Council on Social Work Education, 1965). Three schools were reclassified with academic department respondents when they indicated a Crime and Delinquency program and subsequently completed a long-form questionnaire. Two other social welfare schools were excluded from this phase of the study when they were found to offer a graduate degree program in social work.

^{5/} Drawn from a population of all 366 junior colleges and 930 senior colleges listed in American Council on Education, American Junior Colleges (6th ed.; Washington, D.C., 1963) and American Universities and Colleges (9th ed.; 1964), and Lovejoy's College Guide, op.cit. The following categories were excluded from the population for purposes of drawing the samples: (1) institutions cited in earlier studies as offering an educational program in crime and delinquency; (2) institutions offering an undergraduate social welfare program; (3) colleges made up entirely of a single graduate professional school (e.g., law or medicine); and (4) colleges or universities not regionally accredited.

^{6/} This includes 385 short-form returns. Ninety-one of these responses merely stated that no course or program in a crime and delinquency field was offered in any department of the college or university.

Table III below summarizes the rate of questionnaire returns among these academic groups.

APPENDIX B

PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS OF SOCIAL WORK, CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY, PSYCHIATRY AND LAW

102/-103-

The data on educational programs for the fields of Criminal Justice at professional schools were drawn from four populations as follows:

- (1) graduate schools of social work in the United States accredited by the Council on Social Work Education;^{1/}
- (2) doctoral clinical psychology programs in the United States approved by the American Psychological Association;^{2/}
- (3) psychiatric residency centers in the United States approved by the Council on Medical Education and the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology;^{3/} and
- (4) law schools approved by the American Bar Association.^{4/}

Information in this directory is based upon responses to project questionnaires from 374 graduate professional schools in the United States. This represents 76 per cent of all approved professional schools in the United States from the four populations at the time of survey (March, 1966 to February, 1967).

Each of the four surveys employed a mail questionnaire of approximately ten pages. An identical follow-up was sent to nonrespondents after six weeks. Questionnaire items were highly structured and pre-coded. Questionnaires were addressed personally to the following:

1/ Council on Social Work Education, Graduate Professional Schools of Social Work in Canada and the U.S.A., (New York: January, 1965).

2/ Directors of Training, APA Approved Graduate Departments of Psychology 1965-66 (unpublished list obtained from the American Psychological Association).

3/ "Approved Residencies - Psychiatry," The Journal of the American Medical Association, 194 (October-December, 1965), pp.227-235.

4/ American Bar Association, "Law Schools on the Approved List of A.B.A., 1964," Review of Legal Education, Law Schools and Bar Admission Requirements in the United States, (Chicago: Fall, 1964), pp. 4-16.

deans and directors of schools of social work; directors of clinical psychology programs; directors of education programs at psychiatric residency centers; and deans of schools of law. Approximately two-thirds of the questionnaires were filled out by the dean or director; the remainder were completed by respondents in other administrative or teaching positions of the school.

Questionnaire Returns From the Professional Schools. Table I below shows the rate of questionnaire returns from each of the four types of professional schools.

- a/ Excludes one school on the approved list which had since discontinued.
b/ Excludes four Centers which had since merged with other Centers.
c/ Excludes one law school which had since discontinued.

The rate of questionnaire returns from professional schools follows a strikingly even pattern among the nine regions of the United States. The only major exception appears to be the disproportionately high return rate from the West North Central region (Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota). Table II below shows the return rate from professional schools by region.

Schools of social work responding to the project questionnaire are located in thirty-one states and the District of Columbia. Responding schools of clinical psychology are located in twenty-two states and the District of Columbia. Psychiatric residency centers are located in thirty-six states and the District of Columbia, and responding schools of law are located in thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia. New York is represented by the largest number of schools of social work, clinical psychology, and psychiatric residency centers. California is represented by the largest number of law schools.

APPENDIX C

UNIVERSITY CRIME AND DELINQUENCY CENTERS

Data for this directory were drawn from 74 of the 75 organizations originally presumed to be University Crime and Delinquency Centers.^{1/} Table I below classifies the 75 organizational units included in the original mailing. About a third (27) of these organizations met project criteria for a University Crime and Delinquency Center. Twenty-three centers offered training programs during both the 1965/66 and 1966/67 academic years. One Center was operative during the 1965/66 academic year but terminated at the end of that year. Three Centers did not begin training operations until September, 1966.

^{b/} Centers engaged in training for Criminal Justice during the academic year 1965/66 or 1966/67.

^{1/} A review of earlier studies and the relevant literature yielded a preliminary list of 75 "centers" which were cited as offering training for the criminal justice fields in the academic years 1965/66 or 1966/67. Questionnaires were mailed to the directors or administrative heads of each "center."

The Centers for which data are reported are located in 17 states and the District of Columbia. Five Centers are found in California and three in Ohio. Illinois, Texas, and the District of Columbia each have two Centers. The remaining Centers are located in 13 different states.^{1/}

The distribution of Centers among the nine regions of the country is shown in Table II below. Seven of the Centers, representing the largest regional concentration, are found in the East North Central region. Three regions (New England, East South Central, and Mountain) are represented by one Center each. The other sixteen Centers are fairly evenly distributed among the remaining regions.

PROBATION/PAROLE SYSTEMS

The 807 probation and parole systems from which data were drawn for this directory constitute a 49 per cent return of the 1,647 systems in the United States which were listed in a comprehensive agency directory^{1/} and to which project questionnaires were mailed from February to June, 1966.^{2/}

Table I below shows the distribution of responding probation and parole systems among nine regions of the United States.

2/ Nineteen additional systems were removed from the population (and the number adjusted to 1,647) due to post office returns for "no such address" or letters stating that the organization performed no probation/parole functions or was part of a larger probation/parole system receiving a project questionnaire.

The composition of responding probation and parole systems by function and age of offenders is contained in Table II below.

TOTAL	1,647	807	49

The probation/parole systems responding to project questionnaires are located in 49 states and the District of Columbia.^{1/} Michigan is represented by the largest number of probation/parole systems (70),^{2/} followed by Ohio (57), New York (51), California (43), and Massachusetts (42). Those states with the smallest representation are Wyoming and West Virginia (2 each) and Alaska and Vermont (1 each).

A detailed questionnaire of 14 pages (long form) was mailed to 247 probation or parole systems considered most likely to engage in extensive training. These systems were of the following types: (1) "centralized" systems on the state and federal levels;^{3/} (2) systems with ten or more full-time probation or parole officers^{4/} on any level of government. The return rate from these larger systems was 74 per cent.

^{1/} Rhode Island is not represented.

^{2/} Includes all probation/parole systems located within the state, regardless of government level.

^{3/} A "centralized" system was defined as one which had probation or parole jurisdiction over an entire geographical-governmental unit (e.g., an entire state). A "decentralized" system is operationally autonomous but has jurisdiction only over one part of a geographical-governmental unit (e.g., federal district probation/parole offices).

^{4/} This is as indicated in the Probation and Parole Directory, op. cit.

A briefer questionnaire of four pages (short form) was sent to 1,400 smaller probation/parole systems whose staff included less than ten full-time probation/parole officers.^{1/} The return rate from these smaller systems was 45 per cent. A substantially higher rate of questionnaires was returned by larger systems than by smaller systems at each of the four levels of government. Table IV below summarizes the rate of questionnaire return by government level and size of system.

CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTION SYSTEMS

116/-117-

The 334 correctional institution systems from which data were drawn for this directory constitute a 36 per cent return of the 920 correctional institution systems in the United States to which project questionnaires were directed from February to June, 1966. The return rate from all correctional institution systems other than jails and workhouses is 63 per cent.

Table I below shows the distribution of responding correctional institution systems among nine regions of the United States.

a/ Includes "older youth" not classified as juvenile within the responding jurisdiction.

b/ Represents 78 state systems and two systems from the District of Columbia.

c/ Six systems, originally thought to be county jails, indicated otherwise. Three of these reported institutional facilities for both adults and juveniles. The remaining three systems could not be classified and were designated "unclear."

d/ Five detention homes are on the state level; three of these responded to project questionnaires. All other detention homes are on the city or county level.

The correctional institution systems responding to project questionnaires are located in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. California is represented by the largest number of correctional institution systems (45), followed by Pennsylvania (18), New York (16), Michigan (15), and Ohio (15). Those states with the smallest representation are Maryland, Mississippi, Montana, Rhode Island, and Vermont, each represented by one institutional system.

A detailed questionnaire of 16 pages (long form) was sent to those 210 institutional systems believed most likely to engage in extensive training because of larger offender populations, staff size, and/or greater financial resources. These systems were of the following types: (1) all systems on the state and federal levels;^{1/} (2) county and city training schools for juveniles;^{2/} and (3) private correctional institutions for juveniles.^{3/} The return rate from all of these systems was 65 per cent.

^{1/} Drawn from: The American Correctional Association, Directory, State and Federal Correctional Institutions of the United States of America, Canada, England, and Scotland, (Washington, D.C.: 1965). Eight institutional systems from this population were subsequently removed (and the number adjusted to 100) when eight states initially assumed to administer their adult and juvenile institutions in two separate systems responded as one system. The 100 institutional systems included were: 97 under state jurisdiction, one federal system, and two systems located in the District of Columbia.

^{2/} Drawn from: Charles E. Lawrence, Directory of Public Training Schools Serving Delinquent Children, (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Children's Bureau, 1964). Juvenile state institutions in this directory were excluded from this category since they had already been included under state systems. One local juvenile training school originally included in this population was subsequently removed (and the number adjusted to 43) when we received a letter indicating that it no longer existed.

^{3/} Drawn from: (1) Directory for Exceptional Children, (Boston: Porter Sargent, 1965); (2) New York State Department of Social Welfare, Directory of Child-Caring Institutions and Agencies, (New York: 1962). Two private institutions initially included in this population were later removed (and the number adjusted to 67) when they sent letters indicating that they did not accept court referrals and so were not "correctional" institutions.

A briefer questionnaire of six pages (short form) was sent to 710 institutional systems considered less likely to engage in training. This included city and county jails and workhouses^{1/} and juvenile detention homes.^{2/} The return rate from these systems (which almost always consisted of a single institution) was 28 per cent.

1/ Drawn from an IBM listing of U.S. jails and workhouses compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in 1964. A one-seventh random sample was selected from each state because systems of this type were numerous and were not expected to have extensive in-service training programs. Seven jails originally selected in this manner were removed from the sample due to post office returns of "no such address" and inappropriate classification.

2/ Drawn from the following: National Council on Crime and Delinquency, Directory of Detention Homes, (New York: 1964). Seven juvenile detention homes initially included in this population were subsequently removed (and the number adjusted to 216) due to post office returns of "no such address" or letters indicating that the detention home was part of a larger correctional system which had also received a project questionnaire.

APPENDIX F

122/-123-

The 308 law enforcement systems from which data were drawn for this directory constitute a 41 per cent return of the 759 systems to which project questionnaires were directed from February to June, 1966.^{1/} Questionnaires were returned from large systems at the rate of 66 per cent and from small systems at the rate of 29 per cent.

Table I below shows the distribution of responding law enforcement systems among nine regions of the United States.

BY LEVEL OF GOVERNMENT

GOVERNMENT LEVEL	NUMBER OF QUESTIONNAIRES		RETURN RATE

- a/ The eight federal systems are as follows: Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Marshals, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Bureau of Customs, Internal Revenue Service, Bureau of Narcotics, Bureau of the Postal Inspector, and the U.S. Secret Service.
- b/ There are only 49 state law enforcement systems; Hawaii has no law enforcement department operating at the state level.
- c/ The Washington, D.C. police department was classified as a municipal system.

The law enforcement systems responding to project questionnaires are located in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. California is represented by the largest number of law enforcement systems (25), followed by Texas (17), Ohio (16), New York (15), and New Jersey (13). Those states with the smallest representation are Arkansas, Delaware, Maine, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Utah, West Virginia, and Wyoming, each represented by one law enforcement system.

A detailed questionnaire of 15 pages (long form) was mailed to 237 law enforcement systems considered most likely to engage in extensive training. These systems were of the following types: (1) all systems on the state and federal levels; (2) system in large counties;^{1/} (3) systems in large municipalities.^{2/} The return rate from these large systems was 66 per cent.

^{1/} Operationally defined as counties whose county seat had a population of 250,000 or more.

^{2/} Cities with a population of 100,000 or more.

A briefer questionnaire of six pages (short form) was mailed to 522 law enforcement systems located in smaller counties and municipalities as follows: (1) a 10 per cent random sample of small counties whose county seat had a population under 250,000 within each state; (2) a 1/33rd (3.3 per cent) random sample of small cities (population under 100,000) within each state. The return rate from these smaller law enforcement systems was 29 per cent.

Table III below summarizes the rate of questionnaire return by government level and the size of population in which the law enforcement system is located.

Among the 308 respondents from law enforcement, almost half (46 per cent) report that their system maintains a separate juvenile unit to deal with delinquents (N=142). Thirty-nine per cent report that their juvenile work is integrated into regular units (N=119). Fifteen per cent gave no answer or could not be classified (N=47).
